
Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

Alan Britt: Three Poems

Alan Britt · Friday, January 7th, 2022

BILLBOARD FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

Classic Kettle Chips, can't beat 'em,
might as well
eat 'em.

Political rhetoric,
can't beat it,
might as well
eat it but don't forget to spit out
the fucking thorns—
same thorns
that created hanging chads,
same thorns
that sent airliners into two World Trades with PCBs obscuring the shift to a new world order;
spit out those thorns
lest you sleepwalk
the Federal Reserve herding us like ants herding aphids, milking us & spinning satellites around our primal mythologies.

Spit out the godforsaken thorns; pretend it's rock'n'roll or something more;
pretend it's Jesus or one of his pseudonyms; pretend it's not what you thought it would be;
pretend anything, so long as you spit out the thorns.

But without thorns, how can we ever know "Enough or too much?" & how can we transform our basement caves into glorious nests lined with birds of paradise art (some say junk), plus the usual native vines with their gypsy leaves blown free by freak storms, or a plastic rose missing half its petals, & the rest of this stuff, well, it's the best I can do, not an experienced bird of paradise myself?

*

REVOLUTION

Each parrot, iguana with mascara to die for, hummingbird by nature, especially as she releases the satin bow allowing her robe to unfold its swallowtail wings baring her torso & torching asparagus ferns meant for Blakean love but not so much for the filthy skein left by politicians on our tap water iced teas with bacterial wedges, plus coffee gurgling every Starbucks rest stop on every turnpike in every state of our godforsaken country.

Any minute now things will look up; any minute now the Supreme Court, 2 quarts low, will receive a moral overhaul.

Any minute now the bi-polar bird of paradise will deliver a gold coin, first doubloon ever delivered by a bird of paradise & only coin to elude explorers, hired assassins, flotilla for the Spanish Crown; anyway, a coin sifted beneath swirling Cuban sands creating a revolution no one expected, not even astrophysicists, telescopes vapor-locked, semi-locked, & not so locked on chunks of rock somewhere between the universal walls of imagination, albeit smaller than previously thought, perhaps, but some just about the size of planet earth.

*

PLUS THE ONE BEFORE THAT

(El sombrero de tres picos)

~Manuel de Falla

Before a trumpet like a cobra haunted one's dreams on coarse cotton blessing the universe with bedbug induced nightmares, crumbs from the previous millennia & hope velcroed inside portfolios begging for a raise.

Eventually we entered the garden of Spain; it was night; I'm certain; the piano was made of jasmine, gardenias & wild roses; she entered; I bowed, & the entire string section fell into the most heart wrenching see-saw
between love & despair, between wine stains
on a stork's wing,
beak earthbound, plummeting at speeds our ancestors never dreamed of, speeds our great grandchildren might never dream of, either; somewhere between paradox & smallpox, but a marble clicking first a mauve snake-eye then a blueyellow strapless beauty near the center of the circle,
somewhere between there & violins flowing like lace curtains.

Buy Optical Illusions by Alan Britt

Photo credit: Sorina Susnea

This entry was posted on Friday, January 7th, 2022 at 7:11 am and is filed under Poetry, Literature. You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. You can leave a response, or trackback from your own site.