

Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

Don Kingfisher Campbell: Three Poems

Don Kingfisher Campbell · Wednesday, March 15th, 2017

Don Kingfisher Campbell has been a performing poet/teacher for Red Hen Press Youth Writing Workshops, coach and judge for California Poetry Out Loud, board member and Los Angeles Area Coordinator for California Poets In The Schools, poetry editor of the Angel City Review, publisher of Spectrum and the San Gabriel Valley Poetry Quarterly, leader of the Emerging Urban Poets writing and Deep Critique workshops, organizer of the San Gabriel Valley Poetry Festival, and host of the Saturday Afternoon Poetry reading series in Pasadena, California. He recently earned an MFA in Creative Writing at Antioch University, Los Angeles. Mr. Campbell has taught Creative Writing in the Upward Bound program at Occidental College and been a Guest Teacher for the Los Angeles Unified School District for 32 years. See <http://dkc1031.blogspot.com> for awards, features, and publishing credits.

[alert type=alert-white]Please consider making a tax-deductible donation now so we can keep publishing strong creative voices.[/alert]

Asphalt Nature

1

Thought I saw a jellyfish floating over the street, but it's only a plastic bag.

A big black caterpillar resting near the gutter —merely a Monster can.

Was that a walrus just now lying on the sidewalk grass?
No, an old cardboard box.

2

A brown leaf hops across an intersection

escorted by the wind.

3

I remember when I flipped my bicycle like a seahorse.

The road rash bright
as any coral.

Anthropomorph

To unfolded laptop screen god

head locks in for obviously

well-made slot
engineered to fit

perfectly the hole
inside his brain

He's got a face of purposeful expression wide-eyed

small-mouthed

armless
legless

penis depicted
like a duck's

And one long long tail

which ends
in a half-sized

version of himself
eyes lidded shut

Ready to be plugged
into the portable

cellphone's female
open mouth

slit with a spotted tongue line

Fashionable mole microphone just left

a short distance on faux aluminum skin

after the fall amazing how difficult it is to chase and spear cheese cubes in a packaged salad when all you have is a plastic fork held by the left hand dancing around a clear bowl imagine spending the rest of your life this way like a wounded Iraq war veteran or refugee Syrian child, who would be lucky to have a salad to eat, more likely boiled bulgur again and again until settling in another country where signs are not familiar this too shall pass, they tattoo in Arabic on each other's arms, how beautiful the characters are on any arm, think I'll borrow the phrase, ink it on my forearm, pray for no more violence, only the peace of growing old someday, finding it hard to make a fist anymore, rather hold beloved shaking fingers to calm them over the passage of, I hope, decades together

This entry was posted on Wednesday, March 15th, 2017 at 3:14 pm and is filed under Poetry. You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. You can skip to the end and leave a response. Pinging is currently not allowed.