4. Post Consistently

Another effective way to boost your growth process on FB is constantly uploading content. With every single upload, your brand appears at the top of your audience's feed. That could be at the FB stories section or reels section.

Aside from that, regular uploads signal the algorithm that your content is worth presenting to a wider audience. That said, start by creating an upload schedule to ensure you can consistently provide your audience with high valuable content that will pique their interest.

A posting calendar will also allow you to plan your content ahead and you can use third party tools to post your content even when you are not available. That ensures you have a steady stream of engaging content, enough to keep your audience entertained.

5. Leverage Your Personal Feed for Promotion

In fact, you don't need to share every post—just the highlights that will resonate with your connections. This subtle approach helps grow your page without overloading your personal followers with content.

6. Invite Friends to Like Your Page

7. Increase Activity and Interaction

Facebook users have a soft spot for influencers who engage and interact with them in a genuine way. As a matter of fact, FB's algorithm interprets videos and posts with high engagement levels as very interactive and worth amplifying their reach and visibility further.
