Indictment of Senior Officers

In the hallway above the pit of the stairwell my sister and I would meet at night, eyes and hair dark, bodies like twins in the dark. We did not talk of the two who had brought us there, like generals, for their own reasons. We sat, buddies in wartime, her living body the proof of my living body, our backs to the vast shell hole of the stairs, down which we would have to go, knowing nothing but what we had learned there, so that now when I think of my sister, the holes of the needles in her hips and in the creases of her elbows, and the marks from the latest husband's beatings, and the scars of the operations, I feel the rage of a soldier standing over the body of someone sent to the front lines without training or a weapon.
