
Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

Israel 75

Rick Meghiddo · Monday, April 24th, 2023

The State of Israel is seventy-five years old. The Jewish nationhood celebrates the rebirth of the People of the Book's physical, spiritual, and political sovereignty based on secular principles of freedom and equality of justice for all.

View of Tel Aviv

This event happens while there is turmoil within and without Israel. From within, democracy is in peril. Its check and balance laws are under attack. From the outside, Israel must confront viral anti-Semitism (frequently masquerading as anti-Zionism) and a conspiracy of delegitimization.

Sarona Market, Tel Aviv

Sarona Market – Bakery

Caffee in a Jerusalem Alley

Fishing in Tel Aviv's Port

Buse driver in Jerusalem

Yoga in Tel Aviv's beach

Pride parade in Tel Aviv

Shopping in Jerusalem

Memorial Day in Tel Aviv

Protests in Tel Aviv

Massive protests in Tel Aviv for democracy

Iran's leader threatening Israel

The short documentary accompanying this blog tries to give an idea of Israel's multi-layered complexity. As an architect, my observations mostly look at the environment, the diversity of people, and some selected works of architecture.

Memorial for the Fallen, Jerusalem

Memorial for the Fallen, Jerusalem – Interior

Design Museum, Holon

Supreme Court, Jerusalem – Exterior

Supreme Court, Jerusalem. Interior view.

Porter School of Environmental Studies, Tel Aviv

The Land of Israel remains subjected to two truthful and mutually contradictory narratives. The Jewish narrative relates to its ancient history, the Land of Israel, Hebrew as a spoken language, multi-cultural traditions, dispossession, persecution, massacres, and reemergence.

The Arab narrative tells of its prolonged residence in the land that the Romans renamed “Palestine” to erase the memory of the Jews’ presence, sovereignty, and attachment to Judea. They referred to it as “Judea Capta,” captured Judea.

For real peace to be possible, both narratives must learn to tolerate and internalize the other side’s narrative. This will need education on both sides, and it will take, most likely, several generations. In the meantime, in the absence of real peace, we should maintain the absence of war and avoidable tragedies and seed ideas and actions for a future outspring.

This entry was posted on Monday, April 24th, 2023 at 10:29 pm and is filed under Architecture, Identity, Lifestyle

You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. You can leave a response, or trackback from your own site.