

Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

Turn This Sonic Wonder into a Permanent Recording Studio

Cultural Daily · Wednesday, March 13th, 2013

Before you read any further, click on the music above and listen. (It's even better with really good headphones.)

That's The Tank. It's is an acoustical marvel, a spiritually altering experience found nowhere else on earth. A 60' tall, 30' across rusted steel water tank – never used – was discovered in Colorado by sound artist and sonic thinker Bruce Odland in 1976. A small group of musicians has been recording there ever since.

Situated near the dirt hills of Rangeley, Colorado, The Tank is a sonic wonder of the world with a shifting, swirling reverberation longer and richer than the Taj Majal or the Great Pyramid.

But The Tank is in need of serious repair, so Odland and his friends have launched a Kickstarter campaign. They need to raise $42,000 by March 31, 2013.

Visit their Kickstarter page to learn more, watch their video, and make a contribution to save this world-class acoustic marvel.

This entry was posted on Wednesday, March 13th, 2013 at 8:49 pm and is filed under Music. You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. You can leave a response, or trackback from your own site.