

Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

How about a Little Primate Love Fest?

Rob Lang · Wednesday, November 9th, 2016

These last few days I've been thinking a lot about just how awful primates can be to each other. However, I was able to find a pair of monkeys who couldn't be more different, expressing their fondness for one another. The blue-faced Golden Snub-Nosed Monkey comes from Southwest China while the long-nosed Proboscis Monkey lives on the island of Borneo.

They may not seem to have anything in common, other than their species facing extinction. Perhaps we as humans can learn from these two by being kind and compassionate to each other, despite how extreme our differences may be.

Old World Monkeys can be good friends, no matter how extreme their differences.

For that moment, the snub-nosed monkey didn't care about breathing.

[alert type=alert-white]Please consider making a tax-deductible donation now so we can keep publishing strong creative voices.[/alert]

This entry was posted on Wednesday, November 9th, 2016 at 4:00 pm and is filed under Comics. You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. You can leave a response, or trackback from your own site.