Matriarch coming soon

Cultural Daily · Wednesday, July 19th, 2017

The Roots and Wings Project and Founder/Artistic Director Jesse Bliss unite forces with long-time collaborator playwright Patricia Zamorano to bring an evening of theatre that represents the demand for justice. MATRIACH embodies an unorthodox exploration of the roles women play in a patriarchal society and the urgent need to transform the current dynamic.

In a time where patriarchy continues to oppress matriarchal roles through all color lines, this powerful work speaks to the urgent need for women in our society to be honored and respected. Some of Los Angeles' most prominent writers and performers unite to bring you a night that will empower, provoke and uplift your spirit.

MATRIACH was initially performed as a reading as part of the Writ Large Press 90X90 Event at Traxx at Union Station to a crowded house. Both actors and audience were deeply moved by the work. There was a write-up by Oscar Basulto in Playwriting in the City speaking to the collective conclusion the piece needs a full run. Thus was born this 2-night show with an all-star line up of theatre legends and literary giants including Jesse Bliss, Sigrid Gilmer, Kristina Leach, Roger Mason, Ramona Pilar, Tamika Simpkins, Diane Rodriguez, and Patricia Zamorano.
