New App Goes from Sketch to Prototype in a Snap

Cultural Daily · Tuesday, October 22nd, 2013

How cool is this? You draw a sketch and take a picture of it, then watch as it transforms into a functioning new app right before your eyes. You can share it with others, test it, and get it out to end-users faster than ever before.

What's behind the magic? AppSeed, a new tool, whose creators need to raise $30,000 (Canadian) by October 9, 2013 to turn their demo version into something you can use.

Take a look at their video, then visit their Kickstarter page and zap the App with some cash. We want to see lots of Cultural Weekly apps flying around!
