Finale for a new works festival downtown, a ballet fest launches in Carson, commissioned world premieres in Santa Monica, flamenco in North Hollywood, dance and film in El Sereno, city-sponsored dance in Culver City, more SoCal dance this week and a peek at next week.

Live This Week

Sit or Stroll

No less than this month's cover article in Dance Magazine, choreographer Emily Johnson comes to town with her troupe Catalyst. A member of the Yup'ik Nation (largely from Alaska), Johnson is here to unveil world premieres performed inside a theatre and on a college campus. Appropriately, both venues on land once home to California's Gabrielino, Tongva, and Kizh peoples. The theater event, Being Future Being, combines movement, visuals, sound, and story focused on "Indigenous thriving." The host venue commissioned the works from this award-winning choreographer and although ticketed, it is a "pay-what-you-choose" in the theater. The related site-specific event, Being Future Being: Land/Celestial, is free with a reservation. Centered on three trees planted on the campus in the 1950s, the two daytime events involve performance and other activities, including some walking (comfortable shoes advised). Being Future Being at BroadStage, 1310 11-th St., Santa Monica; Thurs.-Sat., Sept. 8-10, 7:30pm, ticketed 'pay what you can' (up to $100). Being Future Being: Land/Celestial at Santa Monica College, Main Campus, South Quad by the Circle Fountain, 1900 Pico Blvd., Santa Monica; Thurs., Sept. 8, 11:15am, Sat., Sept. 10, 1pm, free, reservation advised. Tickets for both shows at BroadStage.

Finale for a fest

The closing weekend of REDCAT NOW Festival Week #3 offers three highly theatrical takes on subjects ranging from Sarahjeen François' exploration of the African tradition of hair braiding to Sara Lyons consideration of feminist histories. In their portion, The Rock Collection (Erik Speth, Sarri, Sanchez, Arletta Anderson, Finn Murphy, Jamar Morris, and Nguy?n Nguyễn) manipulate light to create a dance landscape that bathes their bodies in light and darkness in Fault/Lines. More on the artists and the festival at the website. REDCAT, 631 W. 2nd St., downtown; Thurs.-Sat., Sept.1-3, 8:30pm, $20, $16 students. REDCAT.
