Peeking Behind the Curtain

Ann Haskins · Wednesday, December 11th, 2019

Dancers in feathered knickers downtown, Greek myth meets the Stassi police in Culver City, folkloric fests in Northridge and Whittier, Nutcrackers coming out of the woodwork, and more SoCal dance this week.

5. Celebrating tradition

The dancers of Ballet Folklórico De Los Ángeles join the musicians of Mariachi Garibaldi de Jaime Cuéllar in Nochebuena, a celebration of Mexican-American holiday traditions as well as traditions rooted in different regions of Mexico. After opening in Orange last week, the show travels to Northridge for two more performances. The Soroya, Cal State University Northridge, 18111 Nordhoff St., Northridge; Sat., Dec. 14, 3 p.m. & 8 p.m., $34-$86. <https://www.thesoraya.org>.

3. Piñata anyone?

Now in its 15th year, Danza Floricanto/USA's Navidad en Whittier has become an annual seasonal celebration with traditional dance, music and song from different regions of Mexico. Highlights include Zacatecas' polkas and quadrilles, Jaranas from the Yucatan, the procession honoring the Virgin of Guadalupe considered the mother of all Mexicans, and the traditional breaking of the piñata. Ruth B. Shannon Center for the Performing Arts, Whittier College, 6760 Painter Ave., Whittier; Sat., Dec. 14, 7:30 p.m., $25, $20 for children. <http://shannoncenter.org/events/navidad-en-whittier-with-danza-floricanto-usa>.

2. A winner comes home

The original show opened in Britain in 1997 where it was seen by then Center Theater Group artistic director Gordon Davidson who booked it into the Music Center's Ahmanson Theatre. Thus L.A. became the American launch of Matthew Bourne's Swan Lake before it went on to become a Broadway and international phenomenon. Along the way, Matthew Bourne showed how danced theater could be a game changer for both arts. Bourne kept the Tchaikovsky score but turned the classical ballet from a tale of some once upon a time kingdom into a recognizable contemporary British monarchy, replaced the female corps with male dancers in feathered knickers, and transformed the lead swan into a male who comforts and seduces the neglected prince then goes on to entice and seduce the queen herself. And now Bourne is back, the show's 20-year old audacity still ringing curiously true. As the British crown reels once more from revelations about a current prince's involvement with a notorious sexual predator, the return of the ballet continues to resonate. Ahmanson Theater, Music Center, 135 N. Grand Ave., downtown; Tues.-Fri., 8 p.m., Sat., 2:30 p.m. & 8 p.m., Sun., 1:30 p.m. & 7 p.m., thru Jan. 5, $35-$145. <https://www.centertheatregroup.org/>.

1. Getting used to being watched

Continuing this museum's involvement with dance inspired by life behind the Iron Curtain during the decades between the end of World War II and the disintegration of the Soviet Union, the dancers, musicians and performers of Heidi Duckler Dance take over the museum garden with What Remains. Taking the title from a short story by East German author Christa Wolf about being under surveillance by the Stasi police and also drawing on the story of Orpheus and Eurydice, Heidi Duckler's choreography is backed by music by Sarah Belle Reid, Justin Scheid and an opera for seven voices by Leaha Maria Villareal. The dancers include Tess Hewlett, Roberto Lambaren and Himerria Wortham. Wende Museum, 10808 Culver Blvd., Culver City; Thurs.-Fri., Dec. 12-13, 7 p.m., $50, $35 seniors & students. <https://hddwhatremains.eventbrite.com>.

And where to find a Nutcracker this week:

Set in 1912, the Los Angeles Ballet's "Nutcracker" is an L.A. original, choreographed by company co-artistic directors Thordal Christensen and Colleen Neary, with set design by L.A. artist Catherine Kanner. Now in its 14th season, L.A.'s own professional classical ballet company continues to demonstrate how well it understands this city. This year the company performs in Cerritos, Glendale, Westwood, Redondo Beach, and Hollywood (with a live orchestra), bringing ballet to the audience rather than expecting folks to overcome hours of gridlocked traffic. The superb company dancers have proven themselves a home team to root for. In full disclosure, your scribe volunteered to watch the goings on from a chimney.
