Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

Radiation City in The Cathedral of Junk

Cultural Daily · Thursday, June 6th, 2013

On the south side of Austin, in the backyard of a small house, exists a dreamy landscape known as The Cathedral of Junk. It's the brainchild of Vince Hannemann, begun back in 1988 and consisting of over 60 tons of junk. Thousands of discarded remnants of global mass production are intricately strewn together to construct a towering structure that has become intertwined with lush vegetation over the years. We think it's a magnificent display of creativity, as is the music from Portland band, Radiation City. Watch this GoPro-produced video to see them perform two songs live at The Cathedral of Junk.

This entry was posted on Thursday, June 6th, 2013 at 4:17 am and is filed under Music
You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments (RSS) feed. You can leave a response, or trackback from your own site.