

Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

Samuel Son: Two Poems

Samuel Son · Wednesday, November 29th, 2017

Samuel Son has poems published or forthcoming in MadCrab Journal, Tuck Magazine, American Journal of Poetry and Presbyterian Outlook. He is also a columnist for North State Journal, RavenFoundation and Mocking Bird.

[alert type=alert-white]Please consider making a tax-deductible donation now so we can keep publishing strong creative voices.[/alert]

Cello

I heard the human heart responds most to the mourns of the cello because it's range mirrors the limits of the human voice

85hz
to 255hz

In the trembling of strings, timbres of memories of longings

even the silence quivers with the faintest echo of the desire that never fully came to rest

Talking about Painting

It was so pleasant, to talk about painting and not parenting, to hear you speak of strokes and colors, and not pick ups and clean ups.

About how the paint brush and the flat knife are like the archaeologist's brush and pickaxe used to unearth what is hidden in the blank canvas, carefully brush away layers of assumptions, chip away at centuries of sediments of sentiments to recover the hue of your eyes.

This entry was posted on Wednesday, November 29th, 2017 at 6:57 pm and is filed under Poetry.
You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. You can skip to the end and leave a response. Pinging is currently not allowed.