Social Distancing on Viral Venues

Ann Haskins · Wednesday, April 22nd, 2020

With performance venues and dance studios closed, here are this week's SoCal dance events that won't happen due to the Coronavirus and two that will, sort of. Why list dance events that have been cancelled or postponed? As a reminder of the investment of work, time, money, and heart from dancers, choreographers, creative and technical staff, who now are without work or pay. With the statewide stay-at-home order extended into May, many events still hope to eventually reschedule and some are announcing rescheduled performances in the fall. Meanwhile, a few scheduled dance events are exploring the potential of shifting to performances on-line (events with ). These join a growing tide of video dance tag and classes. (Latest info below, but please check the websites as these transitions are occurring daily). For now, here are links for information and connection.

Performance Now Online () or cancelled/postponed:

BODYTRAFFIC's Minghella at Wallis Annenberg Center for the Performing Arts, Beverly Hills; Wed.-Sat., April 29-May 2. <https://thewallis.org/>, <http://bodytraffic.com/>. All Wallis events cancelled or postponed until after May 31.

Heidi Duckler Dance's Illuminating The Chandelier. This "zoomed" site specific new work finds Duckler returning for inspiration to the writings of Brazilian author Clarice Lispector, specifically her novel The Chandelier which considers the interior monologue of a woman in isolation, with dissociated and dreamlike feelings who has trouble connecting to the world around her. An apt subject during pandemic quarantine. The live stream offers a shortened version of the work originally scheduled for last weekend at the Wallis and now rescheduled for a fall premiere, but for now, previewable online with registration. Thurs., April 30, 5 p.m. (available OnDemand afterward), free with registration; suggested donation $5. <https://www.eventbrite.com/d/online/heidi-duckler-dance-illuminating-the-chandelier/>.
