10.1.12

October

The ravens gathered at the top of the hill, morning but the moon is still out
as though it was the sun-

and the trees are upside down
as I walk in circles to train the dog.

10.2.12

The moon is wobbly.

10.3.12

The moon is still out

rolling smaller

as though it is sinking
into the ocean

or another horizon.

10.4.12

Cooler this morning

I carve eyes into the linoleum to wake it up.

10.5.12

chilly wet morning air

as the sky lightens it is soft gray with some purple mixed in which brings out the yellow in the green and the plants glow-soft-rounded and smudged by the mist.

10.6.12

Belladonna
&
Spigelia

10.7.12

Relief?

no pain?

A memory of what I was yesterday.
Frightening.
What I was beginning
and now freed of it
like the dry caked earth
from Summer heat.

Nothing lasts forever
nothing stays the same forever
there is no forever
only moments
unbelievably free from pain.

10.8.12

Cold wet damp.

The earth lies back,
supine
odalisque
against the clouds
and gray pillowed sky.

10.9.12

Emptied
marrow
bones
scatter the yard
like Hansel and Gretel
bread crumbs
to find their way back home.

10.10.12

honey bee in the house
trying to get out of the window
trapped in dog hair
nest spider webs
minotaur maze
I gather it in my hands
and place it in the middle of a large rose flower outside.

10.11.12

Cold enough to the heat on in the car.

Storm clouds in the South East
bright sky in North West.

Thunder showers are predicted.

10.12.12

The sun is pushing back the gray.

10.13.12

And the sun wins

But in the shadow and shade
there are remnants of the rain,
and two large mushrooms
attest to the darkness and water everywhere.

10.14.12

Last night pruned and moved giant branches of pencil cactus gloves-long sleeves-boots-glasses

but the milky poison got on my arm, my stomach, and melded into the sweat which dripped into my right eye.

I have been baptized.

10.16.12

Hot again.

I thought it was Friday.

Watering pencil cactus that I pruned and replanted.
It stands, leans against the fence-

fingers point to the sky.

10.17.12

Too hot

dogs panting.

10.18.12

Stigmata

my palms cut and bleeding from opening old matted and framed prints-beautiful frames that hold dreams of possibilities-

opened disemboweled
to make room for something else.

10.19.12

I thought it was Thursday
when I woke up.

Hot but looming darkness
and streaks of cold in the air.

10.20.12

light rain

light darkness

*

10.21.12

My birthday

light rain in the morning I felt it-

clouds alternate with sun

rose blossoms.

10.22.12

Cold,

I lie against the half moon

relieved

The gray and yellow that illuminates the green again so that the plants emit lights from inside
the pockets of chlorophyll.

It rained last night
I only know from the dark pattern
on the concrete steps.

10.23.12

Rain.

I can hardly hear it
for the birds in the bush
with orange flowers.

The sky is half white and half blue divided by a ragged tear of the edge of Unryu rice paper.

And then my house is filled with yellow and orange tinges of pink as the sun comes up.

10.24.12

getting warm again

but a wind is there,
here,
it makes the trees bend,
blown
drying clothes off
the line.

10.25.12

Only the wind

and dry heat that rides it

like a naked woman
drunk and unnerving

fist raised carrying a flag
to conquer everything in sight.

10.26.12

mountains camouflage at night.

6 am
the stars are so white and close.

freeway car lights must look like stars
and planets from above.

10.27.12

The gray stepping stones at night
look white like bread crumbs dropped behind Hansel and Gretel

like the plotting of a planet
across the sky.

The pine tree stands straight while their shadows lean against the mountain and rest.

10.28.12

Every morning that I wake up when it is dark and watch it go light
become light
I am shocked
I sit now in light
and I can't believe that it happened.

A murder of crows fly above me-
their wings with their sound whispering leather flap-

and the wind made visible
for a moment.

10.29.12

Full moon

I watch the landscape
emerge from the darkness again.
It's cold, but by the middle of the day
its hot again.

I can't take it feel bloated
as though
I am stuffed into a skin
like a sausage
ground pork meat
roasting in the sun.

10.30.12

While there is a hurricane on the East Coast

it is hot here

with a heat that clenches in rigor mortis

the iron fist

the iron maiden

only to lose it's power
when it is dark and night

which melts everything to black.

10.31.12

With the people in costumes in the street
the two people sitting on the folded cloth below the freeway are at home now.

The air has more water.
The clothes on the line take longer to dry.

What if nothing feels safe?
What if nothing is safe?
And you cannot hold onto anything-everything changes.
The earth is turning on itself
as well as moving in an orbit.
What do you do with that?
