

Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

They Write by Night: Conjugal Bliss and Some Murders

Suzanne Lummis · Wednesday, May 12th, 2021

It's not noir exactly — this show's much too cheerful, and it pre-dates noir — but it's got some bodies, murdered ones, and a detective to puzzle over them. So, close enough.

It's not a realistic marriage, not exactly, but parts catch the fun of marriage — or, at least the fun parts of a fun marriage. And in The Thin Man nothing's more fun than solving some murders. Why, Nick Charles, with moral support from his wife Nora, can solve a murder in between cocktails. That's Nick and Nora played by William Powell and the peerless Myrna Loy.

I'm now discovering how many of my friends lust after Powell. I never woulda guessed. Just goes to show — ya never really know anybody.

And, as for the female lead... I want to be Myrna Loy and, years back, an elegant, older British man told me I could be. In fact, he went further. He told me I was... Some men'll say anything.

And some of the things men'll say are said by the massively popular poet and YA author, first Poet Laureate of South Pasadena. You know who I'm talking about. Ron Koertge. I feature his poem, and what a smooth, silky noir poem it is.

- Suzanne Lummis

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_fdzSOO9yp0

Top image credit to www.Poetry.LA

This entry was posted on Wednesday, May 12th, 2021 at 11:47 am and is filed under Film. You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. You can skip to the end and leave a response. Pinging is currently not allowed.

