What New Technology Can Teach Our Government

Cultural Daily · Thursday, August 1st, 2013

Something big broken in your community? This TEDxUSC video features Jennifer Pahlka of Code for America explaining how new technology start-ups can revolutionize the way cities operate. Instead of top-down decision-making, this talk enables the individual to discover empowered solutions based on social action initiatives and community based engagement. A must for any one interested in making a difference.
Read more about Code for America and get informed about a new kind of public service.
