Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

They Write By Night, Episode 8

Suzanne Lummis · Wednesday, January 30th, 2019

Are the Femmes Fatale?

Clips from Devil in a Blue Dress and Chinatown come on the screen — I re-think the "femme fatale." That's right, I can both think and re-think. Not for nothing that liz gonzález calls me "The Dame with Brains" — though my eighth-grade math teacher, the unhappy Mrs. Roberson, would not have agreed. She once threw some chalk at me, something to do with a multiplication problem. That was life in that dirty, angry little railroad town, Truckee, where no doubt many noir crimes got committed, mostly by drunk people. Now it's a charming little boutique tourist town. Noir crimes might still take place, but they'll never be found out. Everything's silent as the snow.

Fine poems about women, or imagined from a woman's point of view, by Kevin Young — from Black Maria (Mar-i-a, as in "They call the wind Mar-i-a," and the police paddy wagon that carries prisoners) and John (goes by Jack) Allman, from Loew's Triboro.

- Suzanne Lummis

Top image credit to www.Poetry.LA

This entry was posted on Wednesday, January 30th, 2019 at 7:16 pm and is filed under Film, Poetry You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments (RSS) feed. You can skip to the end and leave a response. Pinging is currently not allowed.